

Why we fall in love with actors

25 0 3

Chapter 1 by Alexis Illescas

So I'm pretty sure most people have had a crush or even have fallen in love with famous actors or actresses. I have for instance and not once but, twice the first was Chloe Grace Möretz after I saw the movie Let Me In and now the second time is with actress Brie Larson from a list of movies that make me love her. Here's the thing though with Chloe I wanted to become an actor just to meet her and hopefully become her boyfriend and the good thing was that i'm only a few months older than her but eventually that fake love died and I know many people have gone through similar situations. Now with Brie it's different, I believe she is gorgeous at all times and if I was her age and knew her I would love to hit it off with her but to be realistic i'm just an admirer and one that does have a small crush but nothing weird or inappropriate because obviously i'm a human and I find her simply amazing. But I digress the real question is, why do we do this why do we fall for famous people and why don't we realize that it will never work? For those who have made it to insane.

The only thing I can start off with is the fact that we are humans that crave feelings such as love and comfort and usually we do that with someone who we can relate to or deem to be the perfect fit for us...
